Are we losing touch?

A teacher was grading her students' homework. Meanwhile, her husband was walking around the house, glued to his smartphone, immersed in his favorite game.

When she got to the last assignment, the teacher quietly began to cry.

Her husband noticed and asked: What happened? She replied: Yesterday, I gave my students a writing assignment. The assignment was to write a paper entitled “MY WISH.”

The husband said: Okay, but why are you crying? Holding back tears, the wife answered: While correcting the last paper, I couldn't help but cry. Curious, the husband asked: What was written that was so emotional?

The wife began to read: My wish is to become a smartphone. My parents love their smartphones very much. They take care of their smartphone so well that sometimes they forget to take care of me. When my dad comes home tired from work, he has time for his smartphone, but not for me. When my parents are doing something important and the phone rings, they answer it immediately. But they don't do the same with me, even when I'm crying. They play with their phones, but not with me. When they're talking to someone on the phone, they don't listen to me, even when I'm saying something important. So, my wish is to become a smartphone. After hearing those words, the husband was deeply moved and asked: Who wrote that essay? The wife, with teary eyes, replied: OUR SON.

We all need to remember this: Electronic devices are helpful, but they are meant to make our lives easier not to replace love for our family and the people we care about. Children see and feel everything happening around them. Their experiences shape their minds and leave marks that last a lifetime. Let's care for them, so they grow up with the right values and without false needs. I wonder how many spend more time with the phone than they do with their families. The children can become addicted to those phones as well. Why do we have to be dominated by that device. Maybe we need to stop and think about how the “smartphone” should not dominate our lives.

“What Must I Do To Be Saved?”

The greatest question we may ask is answered plainly in God's Word. God encourages us to be noble enough to examine these teachings (Acts 17:11) and then to love Him enough to obey them (John 14:15).

- We must come to Him through Christ (Hebrews 5:9; John 14:6).
- Biblical faith is achieved only through study of His Word (Hebrews 11:6; Romans 10:17).
- Knowing the truth will move us repent of my sins (Acts 2:38; 17:30).
- We must confess Him before others (Acts 8:36-37).
- Those who believe the gospel will be baptized for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38; Acts 22:16; Acts 16:32-34).
- I must live faithfully to His Word (1 John 1:5-9).

Be a blessed person. Look into God's word and be wise enough to change your life to coincide with His word. James 1: 25 “But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.”
